Sketches of Spain

In a seventeenth-century manor house in the enchanting white Spanish hill town of Vejer de la Frontera, the brand-new Hotel V offers twelve impeccably minimalist rooms, glorious views of the Andalusian countryside, and rates as low as €200 a night. Besides exploring the town, guests can check out nearby Cádiz as well as quiet beaches and pristine pine forests; hotelv-vejer.com. . . . North of Valencia, El Maezrazgo—with its great rocky mountains and unspoiled medieval villages, called aldeas—is one of the country's least-traveled regions. Created from the restored ruins of an abandoned aldea, the rustically chic hotel AldeaRoqueta overlooks antiquated plazas and lanes. This peaceful spot is a great base for hiking and biking, and has a pretty pond for swimming as well as a restaurant serving regional game and fish specialties. Junior suites from €170, including breakfast and dinner; aldearoqueta.com.

La Vie Bohème

Tucked away in southern France's reenergized Montpellier, Baudon de Mauny is a charming getaway. Housed in an eighteenth-century nobleman's mansion, its five guest rooms feature high ceilings, Cole & Son wallpapers, modernist furniture—and rates as low as €175 for a double, including breakfast. Located in Montpellier's atmospheric historic district, the inn is steps from the city's sixteenth-century botanical garden and from the spectacular, recently expanded Fabre museum; baudondemauny.com. . . . The storied Norman harbor town of Honfleur—with its cobbled streets, timbered houses, and fine seafood restaurants—now boasts La Petite Folie, with five well-appointed rooms (decorated with antiques and Porthault linens) and three apartments within a former sea captain's residence and in a fourteenth-century annex next door. Rooms from €130, including breakfast; chicretreats.com. . . . Just off the Boulevard Raspail, in Paris's fashionable Sixth Arrondissement, the newly revamped Hôtel Le Sainte-Beuve has visitors abuzz. Decorator David Hicks styled the 22 smart rooms, with doubles from €145; parishotelcharme.com.

Little Italy

High in the rugged foothills of Italy's Le Marche region sits Casa San Ruffino, an idyllic inn on the edge of a centuries-old village, offering four guest rooms with beamed ceilings and stone floors, an excellent restaurant (wild mushrooms and truffles are local delicacies), and a lovely pool. Rates are a mere €100 a night for two; chicretreats.com.
